CHANCES AT THE ASYLUM

Dr. Thos. W. Gardiner Resumes Place Laid Down In 1900.

NEW STEWARD ALSO

Four Democratic Officers Lose Out By Change of Administration.

Wholesale changes took place at the Western asylum yesterday. Dr. T. W. Gardiner, of Madisonville, who was Superintendent from 1896 to 1900, again assumed that position under the Board of Control. Dr. Gardiner is a Republican. He is a high class executive officer of great skill and extensive experience and will prove a worthy successor to Dr. Stephens. Dr. Stephens will no doubt, after a short rest, locate in Hopkinsville to practice medicine. Mr. S. A. Pate, of Breckinridge county, also entered upon the duties of Steward, succeeding Eli Berry, who will embark in business in this city.

Dr. J. M. Ferguson, first assistant physician, has not been removed or re-appointed, and his fate is unknown.

John B. Chilton, manager of the farm, has been relieved of his duties. The place, which paid $500, has been abolished.

Treasurer L. H. Davis also turned over to Gus T. Brannon the custody of the asylum funds. This place also paid $500. Mr. Brannon will serve without pay, in order that his bank, the Commercial Savings Bank, may retain the deposit of the asylum.

Denied New Trial and Held Without Bail Pending Appeal.

No Truth In the Report That His Band Would Attempt His Rescue.

Benton, Ky., June 30.—Judge Reed overruled a motion for a new trial in the case of Dr. R. Champion sentenced to the penitentiary for one year for participation in the night rider raid in Birmingham.

Dr. Champion's attorneys served notice that they will take an appeal. Dr. Champion, who is held without bail, will be removed from the Benton jail to Paducah for safe keeping, as the lock-up here is not secure.

There is no truth in the report sent broadcast that a mob of night riders was being formed to release Dr. Champion. Perfect order prevails in Marshall county and no trouble is anticipated.

In the recent trial six of the jury stood for a sentence of fifteen years, four for a sentence ranging from five to ten years, while two held out for an acquittal until the compromise, making the first conviction in the State for night riding.

DECIDES TO GO TO PEN.

It was agreed that the prisoner should go to the penitentiary pending his appeal, which probably will not be heard before fall.

Dr. Champion, the alleged captain of the Lyon county night riders, is 45 years old and he has resided in Lyon county, near Eddyville, for fifteen years and has accumulated a fortune. He is a man of splendid physique and has a wife and four children. His son, Courtney, was indicted by the grand jury for alleged participation in the same raid.

The defense in the trial rested on the alibi that Dr. Champion was thrown from a horse and was physically unable to attend to his practice. However, he said he was at the home of Tom Duncan with a sick child until 2 o'clock in the morning on the night of the raid. The defense used forty witnesses to corroborate his story, while the Commonwealth introduced twenty-four witnesses, ten of whom swore they recognized Dr. Champion by his voice and general appearance.

The trial was a bitter legal fight, and the defense, spurred on by an acquittal and a hung jury, made a strong fight for an acquittal of Dr. Champion. Commonwealth's Attorney John G. Lovett made a fearless fight, and much credit for the conviction in the state for night riding falls to him. Charles K. Wheeler, for the defense, and Attorney Lovett made masterful speeches to the McCracken county jury.

BAPTIST CHURCH

Will Hold Regular Sunday Night Services Throughout Summer.

The Baptist church, at the last business meeting, decided not to take part in the union services arranged by the city churches for July and August, on Sunday nights. This is due to the fact that Pastor Millard A. Jenkins is engaged in preaching a special series of sermons on Sunday evenings that cannot well be interrupted. An additional reason is that the financial system of the Baptist church, the envelope system, depends upon regular services, the envelopes being printed and dated for every Sunday.

Death Prevents Wedding.

John McCallip, of Washington, was drowned two days before the day set for his marriage to Miss Julia Hanna, of Crawfordville, Ind. He was bathing in the Potomac river.

MAD DOG BITES TWO PEOPLE

Rabid Beast Creates Panic In the Asylum Vicinity.

ONE GOES TO CHICAGO.

J. H. Denton and a Colored Boy Named Boyd Are Victims.

J. H. Denton's dog was taken with rabies Sunday and bit Mr. Denton on the calf of his leg and also on his hand. A negro boy, a son of Rob Boyd, was also bitten on the shoulder. Monday afternoon the dog died in the convulsions of acute hydrophobia.

About a month ago a dog belonging to W. H. Salter went mad and bit Mr. Denton's dog and other dogs in the neighborhood of the asylum. Several of the dogs bitten were killed, after Mr. Salter's dog ran off from home and it is supposed died.

Mr. Denton's dog also bit dogs belonging to Sam Morris and Will Wade. Monday night Mr. Denton, accompanied by his son, Raulie Denton, went to Chicago to take the Pasteur treatment for hydrophobia. A collection was taken up by the neighbors to send the negro boy also and he was expected to go last night. The people in the vicinity are very much stirred up and a good many dogs have been killed and others are kept confined. They will be closely watched and every precaution taken to prevent further cases.

There is a very general demand for the re-enactment of a dog ordinance to take the place of one repealed last year. The city is afflicted with many worthless dogs and it is almost impossible to take effective measures against hydrophobia without some way to reach the dogs.

If any cases of hydrophobia appear in the city, a slaughter of all unmuzzled dogs will be inaugurated by the police.

FOR KENTUCKY—Generally fair Thursday. Not much change in temperature.

This year's baby has been named Jaime by the king and queen of Spain.

It is a dull week when somebody is not killed or wounded in Clarksville, although a treaty of peace was entered in to a month ago.

The recount of votes has been completed in New York and McClellan has been declared legally elected Mayor over Hearst.

The Republican State Central Committee has been called to meet in Louisville July 8. A campaign committee will be selected at the meeting.

Gov. Willson has resumed his duties as Governor and stopped the epidemic of pardons that had been raging at Frankfort while acting Governor Cox was at the helm.

A new candidate is being brought out every day for Vice President by the newspaper correspondents, at Denver, although the delegates will not be there for a week, Chamberlain, of Oregon, is the latest.

Congressman Rhinock is being opposed for re-nomination in the Sixth District by Judge John T. Hodge. Dr. Shaler Berry and Cliff Nadaud. Judge Hodge is making his race in opposition to the Equity organization.

Warden E. E. Mudd, of Frankfort penitentiary, has issued orders that after July 1 the convicts will be permitted to receive only their weekly home papers, and daily papers of general circulation now going to the convicts will be cut off.

Commonwealth's Attorney R. Y. Thomas, of Greenville, was nominated for Congress in the Democratic Convention at Bowling Green Tuesday. The district went Republican in the last two elections. It is now represented by Dr. H. D. James, of Greenville.

Judge Henry B. Hines and Ed O. Leigh have launched the Bowling Green Messenger, which made its initial appearance Sunday and which will be issued every Thursday and Sunday hereafter. It is Democratic in politics and starts out with a good advertising patronage.

James Blackwell Neal, a bridegroom of two days, mysteriously disappeared in Cincinnati Sunday, with $500 on his person. The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and enabling nature to do its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The latest charge against Sherman is that he sports red burnside whiskers and it looks like the popular clamor for a clean shave is going to force him to cut them off.

Gov. Johnson insists that he does not want second place. Roosevelt said the same in 1900 and yet in twelve months he was President. Better remember, that we've had one Governor Johnson, who became President through the vice-presidency. The office-seekers may worry President Bryan to death before his term is half out.

Young America and the glorious Fourth is well depicted on the handsome colored front cover of the July American Boy, and the contents of the magazine will surely satisfy every reader, in variety, interesting and instructive reading. Continued chapters of the fine serials, Bred in the Bone, or Born an Electrician. That Dillingham Boy, and Four Boys on the Mississippi are given, and there is the first installment of Under the Great White Canvas, describing the interesting and unique experiences of Hugh C. Weir with the great Ringling Brothers, Circus. The smaller stories are full of interest and excitement.

Nearly $100,000 was paid out of the State Treasury Monday, mainly to settle the school claims, which amounted to $83,000, and the treasury is not in good condition. After the payments which must be paid tomorrow there will be left in the treasury only about $100,000, and there are outstanding against it warrants for $175,000, with more to come. The money which is now coming into the treasury comes from banks and, while it has dragged the State out of a hole for the time being, there is no immediate prospect of relief.

VOTE ON LOCAL OPTION.

Madisonville in the Throes of a Prohibition Contest.

Madisonville, Ky., July 1.—The special registration for the local option election was held Monday. Over three hundred new names were entered upon the registration books.

Both the "wets" and "drys" worked hard all day to poll a full registration and both are claiming that they will be victorious at the election to be held Wednesday, July 8th.

The people of Madisonville generally take a deep interest in all elections but the local option fight will cause them to exert more interest than any election in years.

It is contended by those who are interested that the white population is about equally divided on the question, and that the colored vote will decide the question. Many of the blacks are lining up with the "drys" but whether enough of them will vote for local option cannot be told at this time.

Youthful Somnambulist.

Ciad only in his night dress and walking in his sleep, John Snow, a nine-year-old boy in Louisville boarded a "night owl" car near his home shortly after 2:30 o'clock in the morning and rode a distance of several squares before his condition was noticed by the conductor. When awakened he gave his name and address. When he was taken to his home it was with great difficulty that his parents were awakened, and it was found that they did not know of the boy's absence. An examination of the house was made, but no means by which he could have left the house were discovered, and all the windows and doors of the house were found securely locked. The boy himself was unable to tell how he got out into the street.

All Regulars in Texas Sent to Mexican Line.

San Antonio, Tex., July 29.—By order of the War Department Federal troops of the Department of Texas under command of Brig. Gen. A. L. Myer have been ordered to proceed without delay to the Mexican border for the purpose of preserving the neutrality law between the United States and Mexico.

Practically all of the troops in the department are now at, or on their way to, Leon Springs, where the joint maneuvers are to be held commencing July 2.

A Man For the Times

Just over the border in Montgomery county, Tennessee, is a man who merits attention as an example of the type of citizenship needed in these days. Harry E. Dowlen is a candidate for sheriff. We understand he is politically a Democrat, but that is neither here nor there, since he is first of all a man of principle and courage actuated by a stern sense of public duty and responsibility to law.

Dowlen lives in a neighborhood where some of the overflow of the Kentucky night riding spirit has made itself manifest, and where there is need for cool and fearless action on the part of authority to restore and reserve order. He makes his appeal for support upon the simple pledge that he will use his best efforts to discharge his duties. In the course of a brief address to the voters, he says:

"I am a Democrat in politics, but in this race I am not the nominee of any political party nor the candidate of anyone other than the good, law-abiding citizens of our country who desire to enlist in the campaign against lawlessness. If I am elected to the office of Sheriff I pledge my untiring efforts to the suppression of all lawlessness. I also promise that I will appoint as deputies only such men as have the courage and inclination to enforce the laws of our State against all who violate them."

Here is straight, manly talk that merits confidence; no bluster, but just honest determination to be faithful to his obligation. In these days of compromise and concession to political exigency such an attitude on the part of a candidate for office is sufficiently unique to deserve highest commendation. We need more of this spirit; we need more of such men in positions of public trust. When a man like this offers himself to the people they can well afford to overlook party differences in making certain of his election—Louisville Herald.

EXAMINING TRIAL
Postponed at Clarksville in Case of Rinehart, Who Killed Fields.

Clarksville, Tenn., June 30.—The examining trial of Collins Rinehart, who shot and killed Alf Fields in the Fourteenth district Saturday afternoon, was to-day continued until next Thursday. Fields is said to have accused Rinehart of being a night rider, which the latter denied, when Fields is said to have called him a liar, at the same advancing upon him with an open knife.
Rinehart pulled his pistol and fired four shots taking effect. Fields died with the knife gripped in his hand.
The trouble occurred at a voting place shortly after the polls closed.
Rinehart surrendered to the officer of that district and was brought to Clarksville and committed to jail, where he will be confined, pending his trial. Rinehart refused to make any statement in connection with the affair.

Sophy of Kravonia.

By ANTHONY HOPE.
Author of "The Prisoner of Zenda."

In vain will the readers of this tale of romantic love and brilliant daring search the maps of the world for the picturesque land of Kravonia, wherein lovely, fascinating Sophy and her mysterious Red Star played their parts. This much we may tell him before he embarks on his voyage to Kravonia. But we may assure him that when he reluctantly parts with Sophy, sometime scullery maid of Morpingham, Essex, England, later spiritualistic medium of Paris, France, and still later of high rank in Slavna and Volseni, in Kravonia, the country of her adoption will be to him, like Zenda and Graustark, more real than are many of the smaller, actual kingdoms of the earth. Sad and tragic in some of its aspects is the love story of Sophy of Kravonia, but its pathos is so lightened by devoted loyalty, hardy bravery and tender, self-sacrificing affection that at the end the reader will surely feel its telling has not been unworthy of the master hand of its famous chronicler.

Chapter Thirty-two

FOR the history of this night from the enemy's side thanks are due to the memory and to the unaltered courtesy of Lieutenant Rastatz, who came alive, if not with a whole skin, out of the encounter and lived to reach middle age under a new regime so unappreciative of his services that it cashiered him for getting drunk within a year from this date. He ended his days as a brilliant marker at the Golden Lion, a fact agreeable to poetic justice, but not otherwise material. While occupying that capacity he was always ready to open his mouth to talk provided he were afforded also a better reason for opening it.

Stafnitz and his men felt that their third day was done. They were within a stone of Slavna, and they had no reason, as they supposed, to fear any attack. The colonel had indulged them in something approaching to a carouse. Songs had been sung and speeches made; congratulations were freely offered to the colonel; allusions were thrown out not too carefully veiled to the predicament in which Stenoves found himself. Hard work, a good supper and plentiful wine had their effect. Save the sentries all were asleep at 10 o'clock and none to sleep till the reveille sounded at 6.

Their presence was a surprise to their assailants, who had perhaps approached in too rash a confidence that they were first on the ground. But the greater surprise befell those who had now to defend the barges and the guns. When the man who had found the dead sentry ran back and told his tale, all of them, from Stafnitz downward, conceived that the attack must come from Stenoves. None thought of Sophy and her Volseni. There they were packed in the barn, separated from their horses and with their carbines laid aside. The carbines were easily caught up, the horses not so easily reached, supposing an active, skillful enemy at hand outside.

For themselves their position was good to stand a siege. But Stafnitz could not afford that. His old foe, where Sophy's had. Throughout and on both sides the guns were the factor which dominated the tactics of the "Suffered day and night the torment of itching piles. Nothing helped me until I used Doan's Ointment. It cured me permanently."—Hon. John R. Garrett, Mayor, Girard, Ala.

Paris in 1775.

Crime was so rife in the good city of Paris in the year 1775 that half a dozen corpses were shown most mornings in the morgue, and nets were lowered each night from the Pont Neuf to catch the persons thrown over by the cutthroats. Yet the punishments were by no means lenient, and Jekyll gives a horrible description of how he had seen a criminal broken on the wheel without stinting from the balcony of his own apartment, when "Monsieur de Paris" discharged the duty of his office in bag, wig and ruffles and bien poudre.

light. It was no use for Stafnitz to stay snug in the barn while the enemy overpowered the barges. Groggily they tried flight, disposed of the sentries stationed on each deck and captured the guns. Let the assailant carry them off and the colonel's game was up. Whoever the foe was, the fight was for the guns and for one other thing no doubt, for the colonel's life.

"I felt in the defence of a mess," Rastatz related, "for we didn't know how many they were, and we couldn't see one of them. The colonel walked out of the barn cool as a cucumber and looked and listened. He called to me to go with him, and so I did, keeping as much behind his back as possible. Nothing was to be seen, nothing to be heard. He started to the rising ground opposite. That must have been," he said. Back he went and called the first half company. "You follow me in single file out of the barn and round to the back of it. Let there be a foot between each of you, room enough to miss. When once you get in rear of the barn, make for the barges. Never mind the horses. The second half company will cover the horses with their fire. Rastatz, see my detachment round and then follow. We'll leave the sergeant major or command here. Now, quick, follow me!"

"Out he went, and the men began to follow in their order. I had to stand in the doorway and regulate the distance between man and man. I hadn't been there two seconds before a dozen heads came over the hill and a dozen rides cracked. Luckily the colonel was just round the corner, below, went the heads again, but they'd bagged two of our fellows. I shouted to move to come out and at the same time ordered the sergeant major to send a file forward to uncover the fire. Up came the heads again, and they bagged three more. Our fellows blazed away in reply, but they'd dropped too quickly. I don't think we got one."

"Well, we didn't mind so much about keeping our exact distances after that, and I wouldn't swear that the whole file of us used the fire. It was devilish disconcerting, you know, but in a few minutes thirty or five and thirty of us got round the side of the barn somehow and for the moment out of harm's way. We heard the fire going on still in front, but only in a desultory way. They weren't trying to rush us, and I don't think we had any idea of rushing them. For all we knew they might be 200 or they might be a dozen. At any rate, with the advantage of position they were enough to bottle our men up to the barn for the moment at all events."

This account makes what had happened pretty plain. Half of Sophy's force had been left to hold the enemy or as many of them as possible in this section of the little troop. Sophy, Dunstanbury and Peter Vassip, also on foot (the horses' hoofs would have betrayed them), were stealing round, intent on getting between the barn and any men whom Stafnitz tried to place in position for their defense. After leaving men for the containing party and three to look after the horses this detachment was no more than a dozen strong. But they had started before Stafnitz's men had got out of the barn and despite the smaller distance the latter had to traverse could make a good race of it for the barges. They had all kept together, too, while the enemy straggled round to the rear of the barn in single file. And they had one great, perhaps decisive, advantage, of whose existence Peter Vassip, their guide, was well aware.

Forty yards beyond the farm a small ditch ran down to the Krath. On the side near the farm it had a high overhanging bank, the other side being nearly level with the adjoining meadow. Thus it formed a natural trench and led straight down to where the first of the barges lay. It would have been open to an enfilade from the river, but Stafnitz's men had been so busy on each barge, and these men were occupied in staring at their advancing companions and calling out to know what was the matter. As for the barges, they had wisely declared neutrality, deeming the matter no business of theirs. Shots were not within the terms of a contract for transport. Stafnitz, not dreaming of an attack, had not recommissioned his ground. But Lukovitch knew every inch of it had not General Stenoves remembered that, and so did Peter Vassip. The surprise of Prasiok was to be avenged.

Rastatz takes up the tale again. His narrative has one or two touches vivid with a local color.

"When I got round to the rear of the barn I found our fellows scattered about on their bellies. The colonel was in front on his belly, with his head just raised from the ground, looking about him. I lay down, too, getting my head behind a stone which chanced to be near me. I looked about me, too, when it seemed safe. And then I seemed safe at first, for we could hear nothing, and deuce a man could we see. But it wasn't very pleasant, because we knew that, sure enough, they must be pretty near us somewhere. Presently the colonel came crawling back to me. 'What do you make of it, Rastatz?' he whispered. Before I could answer we heard a brisk exchange of fire in front of the barn. 'I don't like it,' I said. 'I can't see them, and I've a notion they can see me, colonel, and that's not the pleasantest way to fight it!' 'Gad, you're right!' said he. 'But they won't see me any the better for a cigarette.' And then there he lit one."

"We had been thrum away his match when a young fellow—quite a lad he was—a couple of yards from us suddenly jumped from his belly on to his knees and called out quite loud it seemed to me he'd got a sort of panic—quite loud he called out. 'Sheepskins,

"sheepskin!" I jumped myself, and I saw the colonel start. But, by Jove, it was true! When you took a sniff, you could smell them. Of course I don't know what the better class wear, but I couldn't have smelled the tunic our lamented prince wore nor the one the wretched fellow wore. In fact, you could smell a carcass of a horse in the skin twenty yards off, against the wind unless the wind was mighty strong.

"Sheepskins it is," said the colonel, with a sniff. "Volsenians, like the Mistress Sophia, Rastatz, or some of her friends anyhow? Then he swore worthily. 'Stenovics must have put them up to this! And where this devil are they, Rastatz?' He raised his head as he spoke and got his answer. A bullet came singing along and went right through his shako. He came from the line of the ditch. He lay down again, laughed a little and took a puff at his cigarette before he threw it away. Just then one of our sentries looked over the first barge. 'Is the ditch in the ditch?' 'I wish you'd spoken a bit sooner,' says the colonel, laughing again."

While this was passing on Stanzitz's side Sophy and her party were working quickly and cautiously down the course of the ditch. Under the shelter of its bank they had been able to hold a brief and hurried consultation. What they feared was that Stanzitz would make a dash for the barges. Their fire might drop his men, but the survivors when once he heard and the barges were drawn up to the edge of the stream—would still be as numerous as themselves and would command the course of the ditch, which was at present their great resource and protection. But if they could get on board before the enemy they believed they could handle their own affairs. They were covered with impediments of one kind or another, which would afford them cover, while any party which tried to board must expose itself to fire from the barges and probably fatal extent.

So they worked down the ditch, except two of them. Little as they could spare even two, they were judged well to leave these. Their instructions were to wait at the mouth of the ditch, where there was much chance of hitting anybody or of being hit. They were to make Stanzitz believe by the whole detachment was stationary in the ditch thirty yards or more from the place where it joined the river. Only ten strong now and one of them a woman, they made their way toward the mouth of the ditch and toward the barges which held the prize they sought.

But a diversion and a very effective one was soon to come from the front of the barn. Fearing that the party under Sophy and Dunstanbury might be overpowered, Lukovitch determined in a bold step, that of enticing the holders of the barn from their shelter. He directed his men to keep up a brisk fire at the door. He himself and another man, one Ossip Yensko, disregarding the risk, made a rapid dash across the line of fire from the barn for the spot where the horses were held. The fire directed at the door successfully covered their daring movement. They were among the horses in a moment and hard at it, cutting up the hands with which they were tethered. The animals were half mad with fright, and the task was one of great danger.

But the maneuver was eminently successful. A cry of "The horses, the horses!" went up from the barn. Men appeared in the doorway. The sergeant in command for a moment hesitated. Half the horses were loose and stampeded along the towing path down the river. "The horses, the horses!" The defenders surged out of the barn in deadly fear of the enemy. The men who were left behind were in a trap. They preferred the chances of the fire and streamed out in a disorderly throng. Lukovitch and Yensko cut noses as many more horses as they dared wait to release, then, as the defenders rushed forward, retreated, flying for their lives. Lukovitch came off with a ball in his arm; Yensko was killed, but through the heart. The men behind the hill rallied the defenders with their fire. But now they were by their horses. And as they were left of them, they released the remainder of the horses outside the barn door. And the survivors were demoralized. Their leader, the sergeant major, lay dead. They released the remainder of the horses, mounted and with one parting volley fled down the river. With a cry of triumph, Lukovitch collected the remainder of his men and rejoined the rest of the barn. The next moment Colonel Stanzitz found himself checked in his rear as well as held in check from the ditch in his front.

"For a moment we thought it was our own men," said Rastatz, continuing his account, "and the colonel shouted, 'Don't fire, you fools! But then they cheered, and the colonel, in a Volensian accent—'sheepskins! Sheepskins again!' said the colonel, with a wry kind of smile. He didn't hesitate then; he jumped up, and he told the barges, to the barges! Follow me!"

"We all followed. It was just as life to go with him as to stay where we were. We made over. We got to the bank of the river. Then they rose out of the ditch in front of us and they were at us behind, too—with steel now. They haven't shot for fear of hitting their own people in our front. But the idea of a knife in your back isn't pleasant, and in the end more of our men turned to meet them in what him, though. I'm always for the safest place if there's one safer than another. But here there wasn't, so I thought I might as well do the proper thing. We met them right by the water's edge, and the first man out was the witch herself, in sheepskins like the rest of them, white as a sheet, but with that infernal mark absolutely blinding. She was between Peter Vassip and a tall man I didn't know—I found out afterward that he was the Englishman Dunstanbury—and the three came straight at us. She cried, 'The king, the king!' and behind us we heard Lukovitch and his lot crying, 'The king, the king!'

"Our fellows didn't like it, that's the truth. They were uneasy in their minds about that job of poor old Mitstitch, and they feared the witch like the devil. The heart was out of them. One lad near the burnt out crying. A witch and a ghost didn't seem pleasant things to fight. Oh, it was all nonsense, but you know what fellows like that are. They are the kind of the sight of the woman caused a moment's hesitation. It was enough to give them the drop on us. But the colonel never hesitated. He flung himself straight at her and fired as he sprang. I just saw what happened before I got a crack on the crown of the head from the butt end of the which knocked me out of time. As the colonel fired Peter Vassip flung himself in front of her and took the bullet in his own body. Dunstanbury jumped right at the colonel, cut him on the arm so that he dropped his revolver and grappled with him. Dunstanbury dropped his sword, and the colonel's wasn't. It was just a tussle. They were tussling when the blood came flowing down into my eyes from the wound on my head. I couldn't see anything. It was just a tussle. I was told I heard somebody cry 'Hands up!' and I imagined the fighting was pretty well over."

The fighting was over. One scene remained. That of the witch. When Colonel Stanzitz, too, heard the call "Hands up!" when the firing stopped and all became quiet, he ceased to struggle. Dunstanbury found him suddenly changed to a log beneath him. His hands were already on the colonel's throat, and he could have strangled him now without difficulty. But when Stanzitz no longer tried to defend himself he loosed his hold, got up and stood over him with his hand on the revolver in his belt. The colonel staggered his throat a minute or two, looked round and rose to his feet. "I saw Sophy standing before him. By her side Peter Vassip lay on the ground, his hands held by Basil Williamson, one of his comrades. Colonel Stanzitz bowed to Sophy with a smile.

"I forgot you, madame," said Stanzitz.

"I didn't forget monseigneur," she answered. He looked round him again, shrugged his shoulders and seemed to think for a moment. There was an absolute stillness, a contrast to the preceding turmoil. But the silence made uncomfortable men whom the fight had not shaken. Their eyes were set on Stanzitz.

"The prince died in fair fight," he said. "No. You sent Mitstitch to murder him!" Sophy replied. Her eyes were relentless, and Stanzitz was ringed round with enemies. "I apologize for this embarrassment. I would have liked to have been well, it was a mistake," he said, with a smile. He turned quickly to Dunstanbury: "You seem to be a gentleman, sir. Pray come with me to continue a prisoner. He pointed with his unwounded hand to the barn.

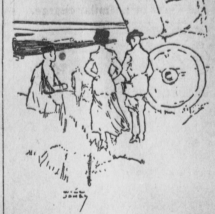

Dunstanbury bowed assent. The colonel in his turn bowed to Sophy, and the two of them turned and walked off toward the barn. Sophy stood motionless, watching them until they turned the corner; then she fell on her knees and began to sob. She was crying for Peter Vassip, who was hard hit, but, in Basil Williamson's opinion, promised to do well. Sophy was talking to the poor fellow when a shot of a revolver came from a single shot—came from the barn. Colonel Stanzitz had corrected the mistake. Sophy did not rise her head. A moment later Dunstanbury and Lukovitch joined them. He exchanged a look with Sophy, inclining his head as a man does in answering "Yes." Then she rose.

"Now for the barges and the guns," she said. They could not carry the guns back to Volsen, nor, indeed, was there any chance of that. But neither were monseigneur's guns for the enemies of monseigneur. Under Lukovitch's skilled directions (his wound proved slight) the big guns were so disabled as to remain of little value and the barges taken out into midstream and there scuttled with their cargo. While one party was busy with the guns, the other was busy with the barges. The colonel's men collected their wounded and dead, placed them on a wagon and set out on their march to Stanzitz. Their men were in a state of confusion. They had lost three. Five were wounded besides Peter Vassip, but none of them severely; all could ride. For Peter they took a cart from the farm to convey him as far as the ascent to the hills. Up that he would have to be carried by his comrades.

It was noon before all their work was done. The barges were settling in the water. As they started to ride back to Volsen the first rank. The second was soon to follow it. "We have done our work," said Lukovitch. And Sophy answered, "Yes."

They left it in the barn, cursing him for the trap he had led them into. Later in the day the panic stricken look keeper stole out from the weller where he had hidden himself and lifted it in the barn. He and his wife found it with curiings, bore it to the river and flung it in. It was carried over the well and floated down to Stanzitz. They fished it out with a boat-hook just opposite Stanzitz's tower. The blut to Captain Sterkovitch's boat. He had produced a vacancy in the command and sent the keys of the fort to General Stenovics. It was Sunday morning.

"The crown had got back just when he said he would. But where are the keys?"

It was noon before all their work was done.

guns?" asked General Stenovics of Captain Markart. The captain had by now made up his mind which turn to take.

But no power ensued to Stenovics. At the best his fate was a soft fall—the fall of a cushioned sheet. The cup of Kravinsky's indignation, full with the prince's murder, brimmed over with the punishment of the man who had caused it. The fight by the lock of Miklevici sealed Kravinsky's fate. Old hands of scolded soldiers began to wind like a great snake over the summit of St. Peter's pass. Sophy watched them through a telescope from the old wall of Volsen.

"Our work is done. Monseigneur has mightier avengers," she said.

For years prior to that time he had been an almost constant sufferer from kidney trouble. He had intense pains in his back which extended to his shoulders and annoyed him all day. They prevented him from sleeping during the night. The relief he obtained from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, which he got at L. A. Johnson & Co.'s drug store was surprising. Imaginary Conversations. Charles I. of England and Louis XVI. of France were discussing various methods of execution at the clubhouse of the Associated Shades society, and Charles frankly confessed that he had hurt him.

"It wasn't the ax so much as the thought that he at the last minute I was cut by one of my own former employees," he observed. "You'd have thought he'd never met me before." "The guillotine was absolutely painless," said Louis. "You'd hardly believe it, but it is true that I didn't even notice anything when I started to crush my hair and discovered that my head was gone. It was the shock of that discovery really that killed me."

JAPANESE ART.

IMPROVING ON NATURE.

THE Japanese are wonderful people. Their arts and crafts have long been the admiration of the world. Not only do they produce the most exquisite creations in metal and porcelain, but they even take living animals and plants and by slow persistence cause them to alter their natural shape and growth. They have produced a rare gold fish with two tails, and tiny apple trees a few inches high, and they bear fruit of their own kind. In their gardens, any effort to paint the petals of the lily or add fragrance to the rose can only result in disfigurement. As futile are the attempts so often made to imitate the glow of health on the human skin by the use of paints and cosmetics. The color of the complexion is due to a pigment on the inside of the skin and its glow and bloom are due to the pure red blond which his veins reveal. Any attempt to imitate this color by application on the outside simply gives a dull dead surface and the continued use of drugs causes a thickening and hardening of the outer layer which may become permanent, causing the complexion to assume that "muddy" look which is so disfiguring.

Nature never intended that women should suffer from physical disabilities at certain periods, and too often women feel that the great distress they suffer at these periods is only natural. The fact is the women who live in the open air and do physical labor are little troubled by the pains and ills that our delicate, house-borne women suffer. At any rate, nature provides a cure for these ills of womanhood in the way of a vegetable compound, made only of roots and herbs, without the use of a particle of alcohol or any narcotic. Dr. R. V. Pierce, the well-known specialist, is chief of the "Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, N. Y. The womanly system is a delicate machine which can only be compared to the intricate mechanism of a watch, that will keep going by running only with good care and proper oiling at the right time. This prevents the delicate mechanism from seizing up. Very many times young women get cold or run down before their time through ignorance and the improper handling of this human mechanism. Menstrual depression, confused head, backache, headache, and many symptoms of derangement of the womanly system can be avoided. Go to the source of the trouble and correct the irregularity. The drain on the womanly system and the other symptoms disappear. This can be done easily and safely.

One of the remarkable features about such a condition is that so few women connect it with its common cause—womanly disease. They try all kinds of sedatives for their nerves, they take "sleeping powders" and headache powders, and all sorts of drugs which at the best can only numb the nerves and stupefy the brain for a time. The real need of nervous, sleepless women is a cure of womanly diseases. Then with quieted nerves, natural, refreshing sleep will come again.

The correctness of this advice is amply proven by the experience of many thousands of women—a large number of whom have written of their experiences. So sure of it is the World's Dispensary Medical Association, the proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that they offer $500 reward for women who cannot be cured of Leucorrhea, Pains, Weakness, Protrusion, or Falling of the Womb. All they ask is a fair and reasonable amount of time to prove it. Their financial responsibility is well-known to every newspaper publisher and druggist in the United States. This wonderful remedy therefore stands absolutely alone as the one possessed of such remarkable curative properties as would warrant its makers in publishing such a marvelous offer as is above stated. It is a perfectly safe medicine which has stood the test of a third of a century, and numbers its cures by the thousands. It is a perfectly safe tonic in any condition of the system, being entirely vegetable.

Sick women, especially those suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

I have had ample cause to be grateful to you for your wonderful medicine. I write Mrs. Hattie Tannehill, of 1133 Yates St., Louisville, Ky. "Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription" has saved my woman's life, and eased and cured thousands of women, who have taken this medicine, dragged weary through life, thanks to your remedy I am today strong and well. I have lost my children, my boys and I feel the joy and my share of life's burdens. At age 30 'change of life' began, and I felt the hot and cold flashes, nervousness, and nervous prostration. I tried to that period. After using your 'Favorite Prescription,' these symptoms disappeared and I carried me through the critical period safely and well. I heartily recommend it to any sick woman, builds up the general health and surely cures troubles peculiar to the sex."

One great secret of youth and beauty for the young woman or the mother is the proper understanding of her womanly system and well-being. Every woman, young or old, should know her own system and its physical make-up. A good way to arrive at this knowledge is to get a good doctor book, such for instance, as the "People's Medical Encyclopedia," by Dr. R. V. Pierce, M.D., which is a valuable work, by sending 21 cents in one-cent stamps, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for paper-bound volume, or 31 cents for cloth-bound copy.

The Undoing of the Bum.

By EMMA ARCHER OSBORNE.

(Copyright, 1907, by E. A. Coe.)

EARLY summer had arrived and the population of the great city had turned itself out of doors en masse. The season of grand opera had long since passed, but a reminder of its glories in the form of an aria leaped hardily gaily, unimpeded by a vigorous, swarthy Italian, was pang-pang something from "La Sonnambula." The machine was crashing away in hard, metallic precision and with the courage and confidence of a five thousand dollar a night prima donna.

The Bum, perspiring and asleep in a lumpy mass on the end of a bench in Paradise park, awoke with such a start that several of the perpetual sons of good near by were visibly alarmed. Some of them moved away hurriedly.

But the Bum's movement proved not menacing. He merely sought to loosen a moment, glanced at the hand organ in no pleasant mood and shuffled away in the direction of Chatham square.

The hardy grays, as if with malicious intent, moved also and right at his heels broke into something sturdy from "William Tell."

The Bum now seemed roused to anger. He turned savagely and was on the point of engaging in pedal combat with the instrument when, as if to call off hostilities, it struck into "Yankee Doodle." The Bum, desisting from his intentions of maltreatment, fled for his favorite gin shop, where he sank into the farthest corner.

Confronting with the heavy noises of the streets and the rattling elevated trains was "Yankee Doodle." The striding old time seemed bent on a new march to victory, for on it came, sometimes so indistinct that it was almost lost, but its unconquerable resistibilities bringing it out every time above the city's roar, louder, stronger, and nearer, until it was at the very door of the saloon, arousing and beating human emotions into activity.

The Bum lifted his head and listened. The snore so recently in his countenance had disappeared. He arose; he straightened his big, gaunt self; he cared his head high; he walked to the door of the gin shop with a firm step, passed out and down the street.

And a new light shone pitifully from his deeply sunken dark eyes. On he went, traveling a little more than a mile—the mile that was destined to prove the most momentous of his life. He hesitated not until he caught a glimpse through the canyon of the street of his objective point. Then he felt a bit uncertain.

Scarcely knowing what he was doing and perhaps from a long established habit of leaning against things for support, he reached out a hand and rested it for a moment against that mountain of strength, the subway. New energy seemed to be imparted to him by

THE BUM GAZED AT THE HAND ORGAN, the act, for he stepped boldly across Wall street and entered a great granite building.

His personal valuation was materially depreciated when he was summarily ejected not two minutes later by a functionary in servile blue and many brass buttons.

"Beggers not allowed," he snarled, pointing to a framed sign hanging in the corridor.

But the Bum had a mission to perform, regardless of unfeeling bouncers. He went away for awhile, came back and stood staring wearily at the dismal beings swarming in and out of the building unrestrained, while they in turn looked contemptuously down upon him from the superior heights of their good clothes.

The Bum seemed not perturbed by their superiority. Indeed, he was wholly calm. He was occupied deeply on how he might elude the vigilant doorkeeper.

"I must get in there," he muttered.

thousand, I should say. And to think you've been—oh, blessed! Why didn't you come home long ago?"

For a moment the Bum's eyes bulged.

"What?" he exclaimed. "Do you mean to say I've something left out of that Hopkins mess?" His face beamed with incredulous hope. He remembered his present self. He raised his arms deprecatingly and shook his head.

"It's of no use to me," he sighed when he saw that the man, who was Laura take it. There isn't enough man left in me to even so much as think of living the old life again, let alone making the effort."

He looked out of the window. Then, turning abruptly, he held out a hand. "Goodby," he said. "I must be off. This visit has been everything to me. Don't let them know."

"You surely don't mean that you came here merely for a word and with

"THIS IS STILL IN LOVE WITH YOU." the intention of returning to you is still existence? Why, I'm so glad for you as for one, and do you imagine that I'm going to let you go? Don't you care any more for me than that?"

"I must go," he stubbornly insisted the Bum.

"By heavens, you shall never leave the room except to come to me," said Higginson, who was of strong nature. He was thoroughly aroused and was speaking forcefully. He could not allow the Bum to return to his misery. Higginson's forthrightness awoke the spirit of the man within the Bum.

"Do you suppose for one moment, Bill Higginson, that I look at me—would face my mother, your wife—and her? Never! Let me go!"

Higginson broke into a torrent of imprecations. Long, earnestly, he pleaded. The Bum held out his hands, then, little by little, he commenced to give until he found himself as powerless to resist the strong love of the insistent man as he had been to give the desire that turned his first steps in the direction of Wall street.

Higginson saw the Bum was weakening and in desperation made his last attack.

"Jim"—his voice was heart reaching in its tenderness—"you couldn't have the heart to forsake us again just when we're so near, we're expecting a little chap we've already named Jim?"

There was a long silence.

The dogged look in the Bum's eyes slowly disappeared. They became cast with moisture. He reached a hand to Higginson, which Higginson did not now ignore.

"I'll go home with you," he said.

The office of Higginson, Matthews & Pollock were located in one of those modern structures that afford tenants every convenience. A luxurious bath room was one of the attachments, and may a Bum on his way toward reformation. And Higginson's valet was a host within himself in the matter of grooming.

James Harvey Pierson surveyed himself in the long mirror and for the first time in the five years of his self exile smiled happily into his own eyes, not so much in satisfaction with his improved appearance as with newly awakened hope and the anticipation of going home and to the women who were longing to greet him.

He forgot for the moment that desolate day when, with fortune irretrievably swept away, he had voluntarily chosen complete isolation. For the moment also the bitter years that followed faded from his memory.

"By Jingo!" exclaimed the delighted Higginson as Pierson emerged to view. "You alive, you look as well as anybody. All you need is a little bracing up and filling out and somebody to put new heart into you, and I guess it won't be long before you have it all right." He added, with a significant wink.

"Now," he continued, reverting to the eternal masculine, "let's go and have something to eat."

THE SUCCESS

Of Hon. Urey Woodson, Secretary of National Committee.

It is announced from Denver that Hon. Urey Woodson, Secretary of the National Committee will be made Secretary of the National Convention. Mr. Woodson is one of the most conspicuous and best known newspaper men in Kentucky and the new honors which come to him are especially pleasing to the members of the craft. He began life as a poor country newspaper boy pulling an old Washington hand press at Greenville and has risen by his own ability and indefatigable energy to be the owner and editor of the Greenboro Messenger, the most successful and prominent newspaper in the State outside of Louisville. Mr. Woodson early developed a penchant for politics and while he has never sought office and has frequently declared that he has no ambition in that direction he has for twelve years been a member of the Democratic National Committee and for four years the Secretary of the Committee. He probably stands closer to Mr. Bryan than any man in Kentucky and it has been reported in the press that he will be selected to manage the National campaign. He has special gifts in that direction and his Kentucky friends especially among the newspaper people be so honored.—Etown News.

For Reorganization. A meeting of the Hopkinsville Bald Headed Club is hereby called for reorganization, in the third story of the Y. M. C. A. building, at 12 o'clock Saturday night. A full attendance is desired.

SECRETARY.
